Funding Opportunity Now Open!

FY2025 NW CASC Project Solicitation

Seeking projects that address:

the effectiveness of management or adaptation strategies climate adaptation strategies for estuaries & coastal ecosystems climate adaptation strategies for sagebrush & juniper ecosystems

The NW CASC invites Statements of Interest for the Federal Fiscal Year 2025 research portfolio, for which they seek projects that focus on developing knowledge and resources to address 1) the effectiveness of management or adaptation strategies, 2) climate adaptation strategies for estuaries and coastal ecosystems and 3) management and climate adaptation strategies for sagebrush and juniper ecosystems, with a focus on the Great Basin.

Proposals developed in response to this project solicitation should focus on developing scientific information and products that can be directly applied to specific management challenges, either locally or broadly across landscapes in Idaho, Oregon, Washington and western Montana. The following are eligible to submit proposals as Lead Principal Investigator:

- Members of the NW CASC Consortium, including Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians, Boise State University, Northwest Indian College, Portland State University, Oregon State University, University of Montana, University of Washington (host institution), Washington State University and Western Washington University;
- Researchers from the U.S. Geological Survey entities (e.g., centers, field stations, laboratories, Cooperative Research Units).

Researchers from other organizations (federal, state, Tribal, non-governmental and other) may participate in CASC-funded projects and receive funds via subawards, contracts or interagency agreements through an eligible organization. The deadline for Statements of Interest is May 23, 2024. This funding opportunity is administered by the USGS side of the NW CASC.

ATNI Member Tribes are eligible to submit proposals via the Consortium Applicants portal. The Northwest Regional Priorities and Consortium Contacts are available here.
